NEW WAY OF EARNING FEES.

Doctors Forbidding Renewal of Prescriptions Without Orders.

From the New York Sun: Only a short time ago several physicians prominent in a special branch of practice met to decide in what way they could best bring to the attention of a colleague a question that interested them greatly. This physician was almost the best known in his specialty in the city, but his charges, in view of his reputation, have always been so moderate that his associates felt the need of protesting. But it was decided not to protest, and the physician received only an intimation that his fees sometimes astonished his brothers in the profession. One physician in town has recently introduced a practice which is said to be increasing in popularity with the profession, and it is likely that the custom will be adopted widely by those physicians who have authority enough to attempt anything so novel. This doctor has his patients take the prescription to a druggist who is forbidden by the terms of his agreement to renew the prescription except upon a written order from the doctor. No patient can get his bottle or box refilled unless he brings the new prescription, which means, of course, another visit to the doctor. The bottles are of a size that lasts for a week. In some cases the same medicines are renewed week after week, but with the order that comes only from the visit to the doctor. They are changed in few cases. The profession has not protested against this new fashion as yet, and it is not likely that it will. But it is only the influential and authoritative among the physicians that are able to attempt it.

New Arrival from Porto Rico.

Porto Rico, among other wonders, has a breed of dogs of its own. A fine specimen has been brought here by J. D. Sanborn, of No. 30 East Twentieth street, who has been connected with the army of occupation. The little animal is called a Castilian terrier. In appearance it resembles a Maltese cat, the color being exactly similar—a beautiful gray. The eyes are light blue. In conformation it is much like a miniature fox terrier, with small, well-placed ears and straight tail. The breed came originally from the north of Spain, and has been known in Porto Rico for over a century. The specimen in Mr. Sanborn's possession was raised on the coffee plantation of Dr. Carlos Grimaldi at Youco, in the southern part of the island. She is four months old and weighs just three pounds. Mr. Sanborn intended to show the little animal at the pet dog show at Sherry's, but was too late for the entry. He took her, however, to the show, and was the center of attraction to large crowds of ladies, who had never seen anything like her before. Doubtless many of the breed will be imported, and it is not unlikely that a class will be made for them in the next show in the Madison Square Garden. Breeders are undecided whether the ears should be cropped or not, the general opinion being that the dog is smart enough in appearance, without any trimming. It

HOW TO OPEN A NEW BOOK.

It Is a Fine Art in Many People's Eyes.

William Matthews, in "Modern Bookbinding Practically Considered," gives these directions: "Hold the book with its back on a smooth or covered table; let the front board down, then the other, holding the leaves in one hand while you open a few leaves at the back and a few at the front and so go on, alternately opening back and front, gently pressing open the sections till you reach the center of the volume. Do this two or three times and you will obtain the best results. Open the volume violently or carelessly in any one place and you will break the back and cause a start in the leaves. Never force the back. If it does not yield to gentle opening, rely upon it, the back is too tightly or strongly lined. A

BIG TRUST

Iron Pipe Foundries Combine.

Distillers of Kentucky Form a Combine With $32,000,000 Capital.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The combination of the cast iron pipe and foundry interests into one concern seems to be an accomplished fact. The prospectus of the United States Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Co. issued today. It proposes to unite into a company the following named firms and corporations:

Lake Shore Foundry, Cleveland, O; McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co., Burlington, N. J.; National Foundry & Pipe works, limited, Scottdale, Pa.; Buffalo Cast Iron Pipe Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; the Ohio Pipe Co., Columbus, O.; the Addyston Pipe & Steel Co., Cincinnati, O. (having works at Addyston, O., and Newport, Ky.); Dennis, Long & Co., Louisville, Ky.; American Pipe & Foundry Co. (having works at Chattanoodga, Tenn., South Pittsburg, Tenn., and Bridgeport, Ala.)

These companies are said to control the largest part of the cast iron pipe business of the country. The company will be authorized to issue $15,000,000 7 per cent non-cumulative preferred stock, and $15,000,000 common stock. Of this $3,000,000 of preferred stock and $3,000,000 of common stock are to be retained in the treasury for the purchase of additional companies and plants.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 3.—Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state this afternoon of the Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co., authorized capital of $32,000,000, divided into $12,000,000, preferred stock, with 7 per cent cummulative dividends and $20,000,000 common stock.

HUSBAND AND WIFE LOST BET

For the Tramp Was Looking at Rare Engravings.

They stood in the doorway, waiting for a lull in the rain, when he passed. "They" were a wealthy baker and his wife and "he" was a man so shabbily dressed and so disreputable in appearance that promenaders turned to look back at him.

"Where do you suppose he's going?" asked the wife.

"Straight to some saloon where whisky is 10 cents a drink," replied the husband. "He has touched the public for the amount and won't be happy until he invests it."

"Perhaps the poor fellow is looking for a 10-cent restaurant," said the wife, following the shabby figure down the street. "We musn't be uncharitable."

The man did not go into a saloon, neither did he dive into the cellar of a cheap restaurant. He shuffled along till he was nearly lost to view, and then he stopped in front of a window, where he stood motionless.

"I wonder what interests him?" mused the woman aloud.

"Who?"

"The man who just passed. I have been following him with my eye. See him there, looking into that window?"

"Oh, that's a saloon, no doubt. He probably only has eight cents and he's feasting his eyes on the booze."

"I'll wager you a month's pin money against a sealskin sack it's a restaurant and he's smelling the food. You are too hard on the poor, Robert. If I am right I shall give him a dollar. Come."

Opening the umbrella, she took her husband by the arm and they went.

The shabbily dressed man was standing before the window of an art store, absorbed in the contemplation of a rare collection of steel engravings. His face, though thin from hunger, was refined and his eyes beamed with eager satisfaction. The woman pulled her husband away.

"Aren't you going to give him the dollar?" asked the latter. The woman made no reply, but she glanced at the husband with a look through which flashed a faint suspicion of disgust. There were times when she almost wished that she had not married for money.

WISE DUCKS.

Stories Which Are the Result of the Natives' Fancy.

In the ineffable old town of Wrentham a great business is made of raising ducks and the exuberant fancy of the native inhabitants consequently turns itself loose nowadays on duck stories, says the Boston Transcript. Perhaps the most remarkable ducks in the town are those that belong to Mr. Greening, the storekeeper. Mr. Greening keeps his fine white Pekins in a small pasture or inclosure through whick trickles—or did trickle—a rivulet of water. Mr. Greening of course erected about this enclosure a high chicken wire fence, so that his ducks could not get out. But on the lower side of the pasture, where the streamlet went through, there was space enough between the wire screen and the water for the ducks to get through and escape and so Mr. Greening drove down some stakes side by side into the bottom of the stream to prevent the ducks from getting out. Then the ducks rose magnificently to their opportunity. They discovered in these stakes, put there merely to restrain their liberty, the foundation of great happiness. They assembled in the rivulet close up against the stakes; they paddled the bottom of the stream with their webbed feet; they stirred up the mud and forced it against the stakes; and little by little they made a dam which caused the water to back and create for them a beautiful pond. And now every day these happy and astute ducks may be seen gayly swimming on a fine, smooth expanse of water, which is the result of their own engineering talent. And yet this is not the most remarkable instance of the intelligence of Wrentham ducks. There is another breeder out there whose ducks possess a nice natural swimming pond, of which they are very proud. Last fall, when the cold weather came on, the pond began to skim over with a thin crusting of ice. Now, these wise ducks had discovered that if water were disturbed it would not freeze so readily; and in order that their pond should not freeze they spent one entire night going in and coming out of the water, and so incessantly troubling its surface that it could not freeze! The proud owner of the ducks, having been out at a lodge meeting, discovered them thus engaged at about midnight and stayed up awhile to watch them. After he went to bed he could not sleep and got up and looked out of the window; the ducks were still industriously waddling in and climbing out of the water. The result was that next day when all the other ducks' ponds were frozen up and their possessors wandering and quacking disconsolately on the banks, these wise ducks were complacently floating and paddling on the free and silvery bosom of their charming lakelet!

Another Pair.

A new anecdote to show the evils of intemperance is found in Modern Society. A Russian peasant returning from town, where he had bought a new pair of boots and drunk a few glasses of spirits, fell asleep by the roadside, and was stripped of his boots by a light-fingered tramp. The fellow's sleep remained unbroken until a passing wagoner, seeing him lying half across the track, shouted to him to "take his legs out of the way." "My legs?" echoed the half-aroused sleep-

Cubans Uncertain As To Gomez's Arrangement.

President Sends a Greeting to Porter and Extends Thanks to Gomez.

HAVANA, Feb. 3.—The following message from President McKinley was received by Robert P. Porter this morning and transmitted to Gen. Maximo Gomez:

Hon. Robert P. Porter, Havana:

The president sends his hearty congratulations and thanks for your dispatch. Convey his cordial greetings to Gen. Gomez and his grateful appreciation of the general's frank and friendly message. The co-operation of Gen. Gomez in the pacification of Cuba will be of the greatest value for both peoples.

(Signed) JOHN HAY,
Secretary of State.

HAVANA, Feb. 3.—The news of Gen. Maximo Gomez's acceptance of the proposals of President McKinley, through Robert P. Porter, the president's special commissioner, has not yet been thoroughly weighed in this city. The Cuban leaders seem uncertain for the moment, whether to support Gen. Gomez or criticise him. Public opinion had been wrought up to demand and expect a larger payment. Some of the Cuban major-generals, who have not been consulted, may strongly disapprove of an agreement which gives them a minute portion of the $20,000 each of them expected.

ALASKA'S AWFUL MAN-TRAP.

The Only Way Through Is a Narrow Mountain Pass.

Austere and repelling, the Alaskan coast range raises a grim barrier between the prospectors and the golden wealth that is supposed to lie in the famous Copper river country, says Leslie's Weekly. The snow and ice covered summits tower toward a sky that is always gloomy. When a gale is not sweeping these mountain tops fleecy flakes are piling on top of the snows of centuries. On these heights there is no peace. The elements are always at war. The barrier would not be surmountable if it were not for the Valdes pass. Even that, with its mighty glacier and treacherous crevasses, is fearfuly dangerous. But it is the only way through.

The Valdes pass lies to the west of the Klondike and Skaguay trails. At its highest point it is 4,680 feet above tide water. To reach its barren summit a continuous upward climb of twenty-four miles must be made. The descent is about twelve miles in length.

Every man who starts to cross the glacier is warned by the guides to make his pack as small and as light as possible. Scarcely any, however, starts who is not too heavily loaded. The guides cannot make newcomers understand and apprehend the difficulties to be encountered. There is more in the journey than mere mountain climbing. Until the summit is reached it is a constant uphill struggle, in biting wind or falling snow, over slippery ice, scaling the "benches" or cautiously sounding for hidden crevasses, which vary in width from mere cracks to fifty feet. The snow covers their tops with thin and treacherous bridges, which are likely to give way when stepped upon, and if they do the unfortunate goes to the bottom, be it far or near.

Underneath the white covering are often abysmal depths, where lie dead more men who have undertaken to cross the glacier without guides. One wrong step caused them to plunge through the snow crust, and from visions of glittering gold they passed into dreamless sleep in graves whose walls of ice and rock rise hundreds of feet above the poor, lacerated bodies.

The most needful and most difficult thing to find on the glacier is timber for firewood. It must be hauled twenty-five miles in one direction or twelve miles in the other. Its price on the glacier is 10 cents a pound. With such a price, even on the coldest nights, there is not much in the way of fire.

A new anecdote to show the evils of intemperance is found in Modern Society. A Russian peasant returning from town, where he had bought a new pair of boots and drunk a few glasses of spirits, fell asleep by the roadside, and was stripped of his boots by a light-fingered tramp. The fellow's sleep remained unbroken until a passing wagoner, seeing him lying half across the track, shouted to him to "take his legs out of the way." "My legs?" echoed the half-aroused sleeper, rubbing his eyes, "those legs ain't mine—mine had boots on!"

Naturally Interested.

"You feel a deep interest in the stability of your country, don't you?" said the patriotic young man.

"Of course I do," answered Senator Sorghum. "If there wasn't any country, there couldn't be any government jobs, could there?"—Washington Star.

and his grateful appreciation of the general's frank and friendly message. The co-operation of Gen. Gomez in the pacification of Cuba will be of the greatest value for both peoples.

(Signed) JOHN HAY,
Secretary of State.

HAVANA, Feb. 3.—The news of Gen. Maximo Gomez's acceptance of the proposals of President McKinley, through Robert P. Porter, the president's special commissioner, has not yet been thoroughly weighed in this city. The Cuban leaders seem uncertain for the moment, whether to support Gen. Gomez or criticise him. Public opinion had been wrought up to demand and expect a larger payment. Some of the Cuban major-generals, who have not been consulted, may strongly disapprove of an agreement which gives them a minute portion of the $20,000 each of them expected.

ALASKA'S AWFUL MAN-TRAP.

The Only Way Through Is a Narrow Mountain Pass.

Austere and repelling, the Alaskan coast range raises a grim barrier between the prospectors and the golden wealth that is supposed to lie in the famous Copper river country, says Leslie's Weekly. The snow and ice covered summits tower toward a sky that is always gloomy. When a gale is not sweeping these mountain tops fleecy flakes are piling on top of the snows of centuries. On these heights there is no peace. The elements are always at war. The barrier would not be surmountable if it were not for the Valdes pass. Even that, with its mighty glacier and treacherous crevasses, is fearfuly dangerous. But it is the only way through.

The Valdes pass lies to the west of the Klondike and Skaguay trails. At its highest point it is 4,680 feet above tide water. To reach its barren summit a continuous upward climb of twenty-four miles must be made. The descent is about twelve miles in length.

Every man who starts to cross the glacier is warned by the guides to make his pack as small and as light as possible. Scarcely any, however, starts who is not too heavily loaded. The guides cannot make newcomers understand and apprehend the difficulties to be encountered. There is more in the journey than mere mountain climbing. Until the summit is reached it is a constant uphill struggle, in biting wind or falling snow, over slippery ice, scaling the "benches" or cautiously sounding for hidden crevasses, which vary in width from mere cracks to fifty feet. The snow covers their tops with thin and treacherous bridges, which are likely to give way when stepped upon, and if they do the unfortunate goes to the bottom, be it far or near.

Underneath the white covering are often abysmal depths, where lie dead more men who have undertaken to cross the glacier without guides. One wrong step caused them to plunge through the snow crust, and from visions of glittering gold they passed into dreamless sleep in graves whose walls of ice and rock rise hundreds of feet above the poor, lacerated bodies.

The most needful and most difficult thing to find on the glacier is timber for firewood. It must be hauled twenty-five miles in one direction or twelve miles in the other. Its price on the glacier is 10 cents a pound. With such a price, even on the coldest nights, there is not much in the way of fire.

But the descent on the other side is a pleasure. Famished, sick at heart and journey-worn, the downward course begins. It is steeper by twice than the ascent. But for a goodly portion of the way men can ride iron sleds. In every mile of the twelve a welcome change in the temperature is noticed. Far away on the bottom lands trees and grass are visible. Flowers come into view. All the wild flowers that we know in our zone and many that are strangers to us, in their blues and reds and yellows, give the weary travelers perfumed welcome. The contrast bewilders the senses. The change from dreary arctic winter to summer brightness is made in a few hours. To those who have come over the hateful glacier, over the ice and snow and through danger, to the forget-me-nots and violets and the singing of birds, the transformation is from perdition to paradise.

A TRIBUTE TO THE TRUSTS.

The Neue Washtenaw Post of this city has joined the list of newspapers that is calling the attention of the public to the formation of trusts in this country. The following translation of an article which appears in this week's issue has been given to The Times:

"Whom do you desire for supreme court judge? This is a question of great importance in these days, when trusts spring like mushrooms from the earth, and it is to be expected that in the near future questions of the highest importance will be brought before this tribunal for decision, questions that affect the well-being of the people, their rights and their freedom.

"In a time when the highest court of justice renders the final decision in every question of dispute between individuals, or between individuals and corporations and trusts, it is highly important that we select men for this high position who combine the most rigid sense of justice with love for their fellowman, so that they will ever have an eye to the well-being of the people and protect them in their rights, freedom and happiness instead of depriving them of their independence and liberty and turn them over to the tender mercies of trusts and monopolies, who are draining the masses and ruining the middle classes and the proprietors of small businesses, forcing them down into the ranks of servitors.

"Dear reader, this is no fancy sketch. It is not empty air but naked truth, conditions that the American people have been compelled to endure for some time. The great monopolies are entering every avenue of business and are rapidly and surely ruining all small competitors. Men highly endowed, by nature, fitted to be leaders, must look on patiently while every hope of independence, for which every human heart feels a longing, is taken from them and their fellowmen. If these conditions continue, and we regret to say this appears to be the case, this country will soon contain only millionaires and poor, powerful and oppressed, masters and servants.

"When a Rockefeller during a period of a few years can accumulate hundreds of millions from his suffering fellowmen, how he may extract more hundreds of millions from his suffering fellowmen by enhancing the value of some article of necessity to the poor, of which he has exclusive control, what do you suppose will become of us? What conditions do you suppose this will lead to?

"Judge Grant, who has been a member of this court during the past 12 years, generally ruled in favor of trusts and corporations and against individuals whose rights it was his duty to respect.

"He seeks a renomination. The millionaires whose interests he has safeguarded during the past years, desire his re-election.

"Do you desire it, dear reader? Do you wish to lend your aid and help place him in a position where he can render still greater services to trusts and railroads, and transfer the last vestage of rights belonging to individuals into the hands of trusts?

"The county convention will take place on the 16th of this month, when delegates are to be selected to attend the state convention, and it is to be hoped that the men selected will vote against his renomination. Should he be renominated, as is to be feared, we believe he will be defeated if the Democrats will select a man who is worthy of the confidence of the people. We favor the nomination of Judge Van Zile, of Detroit, because we believe he possesses a heart responsive to the wants and necessities of the people, and because we believe he will not prostitute his high office to seek the favor of railroads and trusts."

A recent issue of the Chicago Democrat contained a list of over two hundred trusts, and so from the cradle to the grave the people of this country pay tribute to the trusts.

Only eleven articles of common use are now exempt from the control of the combines, and at no late day most if not all of these will be gathered in.

When a man sits down to his breakfast he eats trust oatmeal with a trust silver spoon. Soon he will pour trust cream over it and now he sweetens it with trust sugar.

Whatever meat he may prefer is trust meat and he seasons it with trust salt. His table cloth is made by a trust, his table also, and likewise the chair he sits in.

When Men Die Fastest.

There are a great number of curious superstitions as to the time of day when a dying person is most likely to draw his last breath, and the tide, the moon and the wind have all been supposed to have some share in the matter. According to the British Medical Journal, Raseri, who has analyzed 25,474 cases of death and 36,515 of birth, where the exact time of day was noted, finds that the maximum number of deaths occur in the early afternoon (to 7 p. m.) and the minimum in the last hours before midnight, while the maximum number of births occur in the early hours of the morning and the minimum in the early hours of the afternoon. As regards the cause of this, he points out that the hours of the maximum number of deaths are precisely those when the pulse rate and temperature are at their highest in health and when there is a febrile exacerbation in illness.

RANK FAKE

Advertising Flour Like Patent Medicines.

Another Editorial in the "American Journal of Health," by J. S. Block, M. D., on the Costly Folly of Using Poor Flour.

At the recent millers' convention held in this city, Mr. C. H. S. Poole, of the Holly Milling Co., one of the best known millers of the state, read a paper on advertising. He scored several kinds of advertising schemes. We quote from his paper one paragraph:

"Last but not least is what may best be termed the rank fake. The most contemptible example of this is to be found in the performances carried on for the last few months by an alleged "health journal," and the millers of various states have been selected along with cheap soap manufacturers and others, as its victims. The method of procedure is to send to the miller a typewritten article purporting to be an editorial and consisting of nauseatingly fulsome praise of that particular miller's brands of flour, which the writer claims to have analyzed. Accompanying this is a letter setting forth that the enclosed matter is shortly to be used as an editorial, and suggesting that the maker of this flour will probably want a large number of copies of the paper, on which prices are quoted, varying according to the quantity. It is a regrettable fact that several millers have fallen easy victims to these bunco steerers. Most of them, however, have taken no notice of their overtures and some have, for the protection of the trade, taken steps to show them up. Such disgusting degradation of its editorial columns brands this graveyard sheet in its true colors and makes it an object of repulsion to all self-respecting journals."

The American Journal of Health, of New York, has recently sent the following article to the firm of Allmendinger & Schneider, of this city, under the exact conditions named in Mr. Poole's paper. That firm has always refused to indulge in fake advertising, and has not bitten this time.

"Editorial.

THE COSTLY FOLLY OF USING POOR FLOUR.

By J. S. Black, M. D.

"To neglect to consider the importance of the rule, 'the best flour alone pays in the end,' is to abandon one of the first principles of common sense. If any housekeeper, from one end of the country to the other, who is at present alive to the necessity of keeping inferior flour out of the family kitchen were suddenly to become possessed with the idea that she would save by buying low grade flour, it would not be long before she would find that she had tried the costliest experiment of her life. On the other hand, those caterers for households who have displayed wisdom enough to heed the warning of the hygienic press and to banish all save the high grades of flour from their kitchen, have, as we know (in every instance which has come under our notice) rejoiced that they did so. It could not be otherwise. The evil influence of inferior flour permeates the whole dietary, because it is not solely a question of poor bread, but also the flour being used in so many things we eat, will, if it be inferior, have a wide scope for doing harm.

To reduce to the smallest possible number believers in the fallacy that inferior flour pays is the constant aim of the hygienist. In some cases it is probably want of thought which is responsible for the housekeeper's dereliction of duty. Yet there is no excuse for thoughtlessness in such a matter. Wheresoever she may be located, she can obtain high grade flour through the local dealers. She should not imperil the health of others, even if she be careless about her own, by using any other kind. The market does not contain a more superlative flour than that offered by Allmendinger & Schneider, of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Housekeepers everywhere can secure it if they will follow our recommendation and ask their grocer for it.

We refer to this flour as one which will fully sustain the statement that it is high grade. It was examined by us very closely, and in the opinion of our experts is a perfect flour, containing large quantities of gluten and hence giving assurance of its eminently nutritious character. While strong in both its nitrogenous and phosphatic constituents, the flour offered by Allmendinger & Schneider shows a decidedly limited proportion of starch. The latter characteristic of course indicates the suitability of this flour for anyone whose digestive powers are not of the strongest. It will not unduly tax their digestion. That great recommendation to the housekeeper—even quality—is another admirable feature of this flour, and it is unsurpassed for baking purposes, making bread and biscuits which are extremely light, whose color is perfect, and whose sweetness is delicious. These results we obtained from an experimental baking we made from the flour manufactured by Allmendinger & Schneider.

"The least reflection will make it clear this source. It is an admitted fact that grain dealers "doctor" their wheat, mixing the inferior with the good. It was costly experience in this direction that induced the Central mills to abandon wheat buying from dealers and instead get the needed supply from the men who raise it. This situation gives it a great advantage over any of its competitors.

Under (3) the skill of its milling force has never been called in question.

Having these three advantages in full measure, the Central mills has never found it necessary to indulge in fake advertising. It will not impose on the generous patronage given it during the past 16 years.

In order that our patrons may see for themselves the scheme that is being worked, we herewith publish the letter received by us, in full, as follows:

ALLMENDINGER & SCHNEIDER.

Messrs. Allmendinger & Schneider,
Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Gentlemen—The enclosed article regarding your flour has been prepared for our columns, and we would ask you to make any corrections in the same that may be necessary to insure its accuracy and completeness. It will be published in the reading columns of the Journal of Health without the slightest cost to you, as we accept no pay for the article and charge nothing for the circulation we give it.

The number of copies of the paper containing this indorsement you may use is wholly optional. If you desire copies please let us know when you return the article. Papers will cost you ten cents each in five hundred lots or eight cents each by the thousand. Less than five hundred at the regular price, fifteen cents a copy. It will be necessary to let us know in advance if you intend to use a number of copies, so that we may make provision for the extra number required.

We have sent you a copy of the Journal of Health under separate cover, and would ask you to return the article to us without delay. Yours very truly,
AMERICAN JOURNAL OF HEALTH.

Will Ann Arbor Have a Government Building

Junius E. Beal has Secured a Renewal of his Lease for Five Years—Gets a Raise of $300 per Year—Will Make Changes in the Interior.

For the past few years there has been considerable talk on and off of Ann Arbor getting a government postoffice building, but such a thing is not to come off for the next five years at least.

A couple of weeks ago Junius E. Beal, whose lease from the government for the present postoffice is about to expire, went to Washington to secure a renewal and upon his agreement to make certain changes a new lease was made out for five years from March 1, at a rental of $1,800 per year, which is a raise of $300 over what he has been getting.

The changes which are contemplated in the interior arrangement of the postoffice will make it much more convenient for handling the delivery at the carriers' windows and will make it handier for persons having business at the money order, stamp, registered letter or general delivery windows.

In the first place Mr. Beal will put in a large fire proof and burglar proof safety vault, the use of which is obvious.

Instead of it being made possible for the entire arrangements for the emthree sides of the interior, as at present, the entire arrangemnts for the employees of the office will be to occupy a large space in the northeast corner of the floor space, and the open space for the public will run the entire length of the building on the Main st. side with a large exit door at the north end. On the west, or Main st. side, the entire 12 carriers will have their windows, and with the four doors on that side and the division of the mail among the carriers for evening delivery as it is now made, it is thought that the evening crowds will be easily handled.

Then running along the front or Ann st. side of the postoffice will be a straight partition, in which the money order, register letter, stamp and general delivery windows will be located, so that all business of this nature will be in one part of the building, while the mail delivery by carriers will be entirely separated from it.

These changes will not be commenced until after college closes next June, as it is practically impossible to do them before and make no serious delay in conducting the regular postoffice business.

NO CURE, NO PAY

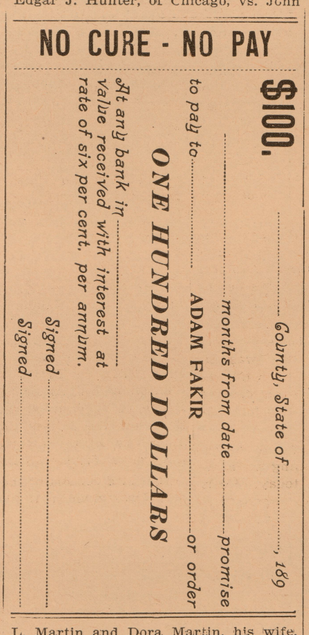

How the Fake Doctors Work Their Game.

By Getting People to Sign a Note With This Condition in it, and then Remove the Condition so as to Make it an Ordinary Note.

There is no advice given as often and no advice which is so frequently disregarded as, "Be careful what papers you sign."

The case in Justice Duffy's court yesterday in regard to a travelling doctor brings this very forcibly to the surface again and, no matter whether the healer in the case in question is a genuine and authorized physician or whether he is a man who could make the blind see and the lame walk, it is for the good of the public that The Times or any other paper warns people to beware of strangers, and more especially strangers who ask you to sign any kind of a paper.

The case in Justice Duffy's court was that instituted by Ella F. Eastman and Edgar J. Hunter, of Chicago, vs. John

L. Martin and Dora Martin, his wife, They claimed to have been innocent purchasers of a note against them.

According to the testimony introduced a man, who gave his name as James Marshal, came to the farm of Mr. and Mrs. John Martin in Salem in 1895 and said that he had heard that Mrs. Martin was suffering from rheumatism. Mr. Martin says he was, and the traveling doctor told him that he was a practicing physician in Ann Arbor and that he would cure him for $100. Mr. Martin then told him that he did not have the money. The stranger said he would take a note and make his cure a condition as to the payment. Mr. and Mrs. Marshal both swore that Marshal took a bottle of "his own ink" out of his pocket and wrote out the $100 note payable in six months, "no cure, no pay." He then left some colored water and went away.

They both swore that the words "no cure, no pay" were printed on the left-hand corner of the note which they signed, while the paper introduced in evidence against them did not have any hint of any such condition thereon.

The jury was out but a minute and only took one ballot, when they returned a verdict that the note should not be collected against the Martins, evidently accepting the theory that a fraud had been committed upon them.

CUT ALONG DOTTED LINE.

Deputy Sheriff Kelsey today told The Times reporter that "traveling doctors" hornswoggle susceptible people. He drew up a sketch similar to that printed in connection with the article and said:

"Now I do not know that it was done in this case, but I do know that in certain cases these fake healers have worked the people by this kind of a fraud. They will go to them and profess to be doctors who are able to cure anything, and will talk the 'no cure, no pay' racket from the start. Then they will show their printed forms of notes with the words 'no cure, no pay' in big black letters on one side of the paper. Next they will say that six months or a year ought to be long enough for the person whom they are treating to determine whether they are cured or not, and that there would be no harm in signing a paper with this kind of a conditin in it. As soon as the 'sucker' signs the document and the 'doctor' gets away, he takes a pair of scissors and cuts off the words 'no cure, no pay' along the dotted line indicated in the sketch, but which is not shown in the original, and this leaves it an ordinary note that looks perfectly good. He then sells it to an innocent person and the sucker is stuck. You will notice that both Mr. and Mrs. Martin swore upon the stand that the paper they signed was larger in size than the one offered in evidence. Well, I don't know that it was done in this case, but if the words 'no cure, no pay' were printed on the original document and they were cut off, then the original document would have been larger than the one offered in evidence, wouldn't it?"

Now, be careful what you sign.

Bones Are "Personal Effects."

A Swiss anthropologist recently returned from a trip through Patagonia. He had with him many cases containing skeletons and skulls that he had collected. The Swiss customs officers opened the cases, and, after long consultation, appraised the contents as "common bones," charging the scientist a stiff duty. The explorer got angry and declared it a profanation to appraise human bones that way. To his surprise the customs officials were impressed by his remarks, and retired for another consultation, classing them as "worn personal effects of foreign residents."

and very realistic scenes are depicted indicating the immense store set by the ancient Greeks upon this remarkable plant, whose habitat was located in Cyrene. Its applications seem to have been as diverse as they were valuable, and among its numerous uses we find it treasured as furnishing the earliest and most delicate of vegetables, also spice, whilst its therapeutic reputation was almost as universal as that claimed for some of the modern nostrums by their inventors. Silphium has long since disappeared from Cyrene, but Falconer has found in the northern parts of Cashmere a plant which is regarded as being very closely allied to its historic predecessor.—Nature.

Lord Kelvin's Reprimand.

The eminent Scottish scientist, Lord Kelvin, who for many years has held the chair of natural philosophy at Glasgow university, is the subject of an amusing story, illustrative of the singular force of habit. As a professor of science, Lord Kelvin can use long words in such formidable array as to paralyze the average layman, but the Glasgow student is made of sterner stuff. During a course of lectures on magnetism, he once defined an ideal magnet as "an infinitely long, infinitely thin, uniform, and uniformly and longitudinally magnetized bar," and the misguided students vociferously cheered, which caused the venerable professor to say: "Silence!" This definition was made and cheered, with the usual reprimand, frequently during his lectures. Once, near the conclusion, however, the students did not cheer, but Lord Kelvin promptly rapped out, "Silence!" as before.

article which appears in this week's issue has been given to The Times:

"Whom do you desire for supreme court judge? This is a question of great importance in these days, when trusts spring like mushrooms from the earth, and it is to be expected that in the near future questions of the highest importance will be brought before this tribunal for decision, questions that affect the well-being of the people, their rights and their freedom.

"In a time when the highest court of justice renders the final decision in every question of dispute between individuals, or between individuals and corporations and trusts, it is highly important that we select men for this high position who combine the most rigid sense of justice with love for their fellowman, so that they will ever have an eye to the well-being of the people and protect them in their rights, freedom and happiness instead of depriving them of their independence and liberty and turn them over to the tender mercies of trusts and monopolies, who are draining the masses and ruining the middle classes and the proprietors of small businesses, forcing them down into the ranks of servitors.

"Dear reader, this is no fancy sketch. It is not empty air but naked truth, conditions that the American people have been compelled to endure for some time. The great monopolies are entering every avenue of business and are rapidly and surely ruining all small competitors. Men highly endowed, by nature, fitted to be leaders, must look on patiently while every hope of independence, for which every human heart feels a longing, is taken from them and their fellowmen. If these conditions continue, and we regret to say this appears to be the case, this country will soon contain only millionaires and poor, powerful and oppressed, masters and servants.

"When a Rockefeller during a period of a few years can accumulate hundreds of millions from his suffering fellowmen, how he may extract more hundreds of millions from his suffering fellowmen by enhancing the value of some article of necessity to the poor, of which he has exclusive control, what do you suppose will become of us? What conditions do you suppose this will lead to?

"Judge Grant, who has been a member of this court during the past 12 years, generally ruled in favor of trusts and corporations and against individuals whose rights it was his duty to respect.

"He seeks a renomination. The millionaires whose interests he has safeguarded during the past years, desire his re-election.

"Do you desire it, dear reader? Do you wish to lend your aid and help place him in a position where he can render still greater services to trusts and railroads, and transfer the last vestage of rights belonging to individuals into the hands of trusts?

"The county convention will take place on the 16th of this month, when delegates are to be selected to attend the state convention, and it is to be hoped that the men selected will vote against his renomination. Should he be renominated, as is to be feared, we believe he will be defeated if the Democrats will select a man who is worthy of the confidence of the people. We favor the nomination of Judge Van Zile, of Detroit, because we believe he possesses a heart responsive to the wants and necessities of the people, and because we believe he will not prostitute his high office to seek the favor of railroads and trusts."

A recent issue of the Chicago Democrat contained a list of over two hundred trusts, and so from the cradle to the grave the people of this country pay tribute to the trusts.

Only eleven articles of common use are now exempt from the control of the combines, and at no late day most if not all of these will be gathered in.

When a man sits down to his breakfast he eats trust oatmeal with a trust silver spoon. Soon he will pour trust cream over it and now he sweetens it with trust sugar.

Whatever meat he may prefer is trust meat and he seasons it with trust salt. His table cloth is made by a trust, his table also, and likewise the chair he sits in.

If this meal of his happens to be taken on Friday and he conscientiously eats fish, the trust profits by his preference.

As for his coffee, he beats the trust on that, but his cup is a trust cup, and, as in the case of his oatmeal, the milk and sugar are furnished by the trust.

As a matter of course, the carpet is a trust carpet, the wall paper comes from a trust and he gets his daylight (not furnished by a trust) through trust window panes.

In a word, he has the products of trusts all around him, above him and under his feet.

Who pays the trusts for these products? The people, of course. Workingmen are thrown out of positions, their wages reduced and competition crushed by the operations of these combines, and with the cost of production reduced and the price to the consumer made a matter of arbitrary settlement, the trusts reign supreme in this land of the free and the home of the brave.

In his conduct of affairs in Cuba, General Lee is proving himself to be the right man in the right place. General Lee is careful to impress upon the Cubans the fact that their future is their own, and their success or failure will depend entirely upon themselves. General Brooke should follow General Lee's example.

When Men Die Fastest.

There are a great number of curious superstitions as to the time of day when a dying person is most likely to draw his last breath, and the tide, the moon and the wind have all been supposed to have some share in the matter. According to the British Medical Journal, Raseri, who has analyzed 25,474 cases of death and 36,515 of birth, where the exact time of day was noted, finds that the maximum number of deaths occur in the early afternoon (to 7 p. m.) and the minimum in the last hours before midnight, while the maximum number of births occur in the early hours of the morning and the minimum in the early hours of the afternoon. As regards the cause of this, he points out that the hours of the maximum number of deaths are precisely those when the pulse rate and temperature are at their highest in health and when there is a febrile exacerbation in illness.

The Reluctant Witness.

Counsel—I insist on an answer to my question. You have not told me all the conversation. I want to know everything that passed between you and Mr. Jones on the occasion to which you refer. Reluctant Witness—I've told you everything of any consequence. "You have told me that you said to him, 'Jones, this case will get into court some day.' Now, I want to know what he said in reply." "Well, he said, 'Brown, there isn't anything in this business that I'm ashamed of, and if any snoopin', little, yee-hawin', four-by-six, gimlet-eyed lawyer, with half a pound of brains and sixteen pounds of jaw ever wants to know what I've been talking to you about, you can tell him the whole story."—New York Herald.

Mr. Hunter (seeing his wife off)—Just sit down here a minute, dear, while I go buy your ticket. Mrs. Hunter—Very well, John. By the way, how much is the fare? Mr. Hunter—Three ninety-eight for the round trip. I'll be back in a minute. Mrs. Hunter—Oh, wait a second, John. You watch the bundles and let me buy the ticket, please. Mr. Hunter—But, my dear— Mrs. Hunter—Please, John, I want to. Mr. Hunter (smiling)—To show how self-reliant you are? Mrs. Hunter—No. But three ninety-eight sounds so much like a bargain.—New York Journal.

fulsome praise of that particular miller's brands of flour, which the writer claims to have analyzed. Accompanying this is a letter setting forth that the enclosed matter is shortly to be used as an editorial, and suggesting that the maker of this flour will probably want a large number of copies of the paper, on which prices are quoted, varying according to the quantity. It is a regrettable fact that several millers have fallen easy victims to these bunco steerers. Most of them, however, have taken no notice of their overtures and some have, for the protection of the trade, taken steps to show them up. Such disgusting degradation of its editorial columns brands this graveyard sheet in its true colors and makes it an object of repulsion to all self-respecting journals."

The American Journal of Health, of New York, has recently sent the following article to the firm of Allmendinger & Schneider, of this city, under the exact conditions named in Mr. Poole's paper. That firm has always refused to indulge in fake advertising, and has not bitten this time.

"Editorial.

THE COSTLY FOLLY OF USING POOR FLOUR.

By J. S. Black, M. D.

"To neglect to consider the importance of the rule, 'the best flour alone pays in the end,' is to abandon one of the first principles of common sense. If any housekeeper, from one end of the country to the other, who is at present alive to the necessity of keeping inferior flour out of the family kitchen were suddenly to become possessed with the idea that she would save by buying low grade flour, it would not be long before she would find that she had tried the costliest experiment of her life. On the other hand, those caterers for households who have displayed wisdom enough to heed the warning of the hygienic press and to banish all save the high grades of flour from their kitchen, have, as we know (in every instance which has come under our notice) rejoiced that they did so. It could not be otherwise. The evil influence of inferior flour permeates the whole dietary, because it is not solely a question of poor bread, but also the flour being used in so many things we eat, will, if it be inferior, have a wide scope for doing harm.

To reduce to the smallest possible number believers in the fallacy that inferior flour pays is the constant aim of the hygienist. In some cases it is probably want of thought which is responsible for the housekeeper's dereliction of duty. Yet there is no excuse for thoughtlessness in such a matter. Wheresoever she may be located, she can obtain high grade flour through the local dealers. She should not imperil the health of others, even if she be careless about her own, by using any other kind. The market does not contain a more superlative flour than that offered by Allmendinger & Schneider, of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Housekeepers everywhere can secure it if they will follow our recommendation and ask their grocer for it.

We refer to this flour as one which will fully sustain the statement that it is high grade. It was examined by us very closely, and in the opinion of our experts is a perfect flour, containing large quantities of gluten and hence giving assurance of its eminently nutritious character. While strong in both its nitrogenous and phosphatic constituents, the flour offered by Allmendinger & Schneider shows a decidedly limited proportion of starch. The latter characteristic of course indicates the suitability of this flour for anyone whose digestive powers are not of the strongest. It will not unduly tax their digestion. That great recommendation to the housekeeper—even quality—is another admirable feature of this flour, and it is unsurpassed for baking purposes, making bread and biscuits which are extremely light, whose color is perfect, and whose sweetness is delicious. These results we obtained from an experimental baking we made from the flour manufactured by Allmendinger & Schneider.

"The least reflection will make it clear to any housekeeper that inferior grades of flour, which sour the stomach and weaken the digestion in time, and which possess a smaller bread-making capacity, will not afford here any opportunity to economize. She will see how it is that the hygienic press should insist upon the use of the highest grades and take the trouble to investigate the flours on the market and report upon them for her benefit. She will appreciate our efforts and profit by them to some purpose by using the flour offered by Allmendinger & Schneider, which, viewed from every side of the question, is entitled to her favor as a product which cannot be excelled."

Now the things that are said above may be said of almost any Michigan flour. But no mill can put ingredients into wheat which God did not permit to grow in the grain. We take it that flour making has three great requirements:

1st. A modern, fully equipped mill.
2nd. Sound, sweet wheat.
3rd. First-class millers.

Under (1) the Central mills claim to have the most fully equipped mill in southeastern Michigan, if not in the state. Under (2) it owns three grain warehouses which buy from farmers many thousands of bushels more of wheat than the mill can grind. It selects the choicest of this wheat for its own grinding, as it comes directly from the producers. No merchant mill in southern Michigan buys anywhere near the same percentage of wheat used from

Will Ann Arbor Have a Government Building

Junius E. Beal has Secured a Renewal of his Lease for Five Years—Gets a Raise of $300 per Year—Will Make Changes in the Interior.

For the past few years there has been considerable talk on and off of Ann Arbor getting a government postoffice building, but such a thing is not to come off for the next five years at least.

A couple of weeks ago Junius E. Beal, whose lease from the government for the present postoffice is about to expire, went to Washington to secure a renewal and upon his agreement to make certain changes a new lease was made out for five years from March 1, at a rental of $1,800 per year, which is a raise of $300 over what he has been getting.

The changes which are contemplated in the interior arrangement of the postoffice will make it much more convenient for handling the delivery at the carriers' windows and will make it handier for persons having business at the money order, stamp, registered letter or general delivery windows.

In the first place Mr. Beal will put in a large fire proof and burglar proof safety vault, the use of which is obvious.

Instead of it being made possible for the entire arrangements for the emthree sides of the interior, as at present, the entire arrangemnts for the employees of the office will be to occupy a large space in the northeast corner of the floor space, and the open space for the public will run the entire length of the building on the Main st. side with a large exit door at the north end. On the west, or Main st. side, the entire 12 carriers will have their windows, and with the four doors on that side and the division of the mail among the carriers for evening delivery as it is now made, it is thought that the evening crowds will be easily handled.

Then running along the front or Ann st. side of the postoffice will be a straight partition, in which the money order, register letter, stamp and general delivery windows will be located, so that all business of this nature will be in one part of the building, while the mail delivery by carriers will be entirely separated from it.

These changes will not be commenced until after college closes next June, as it is practically impossible to do them before and make no serious delay in conducting the regular postoffice business.

L. Martin and Dora Martin, his wife. They claimed to have been innocent purchasers of a note against them.

According to the testimony introduced a man, who gave his name as James Marshal, came to the farm of Mr. and Mrs. John Martin in Salem in 1895 and said that he had heard that Mrs. Martin was suffering from rheumatism. Mr. Martin says he was, and the traveling doctor told him that he was a practicing physician in Ann Arbor and that he would cure him for $100. Mr. Martin then told him that he did not have the money. The stranger said he would take a note and make his cure a condition as to the payment. Mr. and Mrs. Marshal both swore that Marshal took a bottle of "his own ink" out of his pocket and wrote out the $100 note payable in six months, "no cure, no pay."

person whom they are treating to determine whether they are cured or not, and that there would be no harm in signing a paper with this kind of a conditin in it. As soon as the 'sucker' signs the document and the 'doctor' gets away, he takes a pair of scissors and cuts off the words 'no cure, no pay' along the dotted line indicated in the sketch, but which is not shown in the original, and this leaves it an ordinary note that looks perfectly good. He then sells it to an innocent person and the sucker is stuck. You will notice that both Mr. and Mrs. Martin swore upon the stand that the paper they signed was larger in size than the one offered in evidence. Well, I don't know that it was done in this case, but if the words 'no cure, no pay' were printed on the original document and they were cut off, then the original document would have been larger than the one offered in evidence, wouldn't it?"

Now, be careful what you sign.

Bones Are "Personal Effects."

A Swiss anthropologist recently returned from a trip through Patagonia. He had with him many cases containing skeletons and skulls that he had collected. The Swiss customs officers opened the cases, and, after long consultation, appraised the contents as "common bones," charging the scientist a stiff duty. The explorer got angry and declared it a profanation to appraise human bones that way. To his surprise the customs officials were impressed by his remarks, and retired for another consultation, classing them as "worn personal effects of foreign residents."

Lord Kelvin's Reprimand.

The eminent Scottish scientist, Lord Kelvin, who for many years has held the chair of natural philosophy at Glasgow university, is the subject of an amusing story, illustrative of the singular force of habit. As a professor of science, Lord Kelvin can use long words in such formidable array as to paralyze the average layman, but the Glasgow student is made of sterner stuff. During a course of lectures on magnetism, he once defined an ideal magnet as "an infinitely long, infinitely thin, uniform, and uniformly and longitudinally magnetized bar," and the misguided students vociferously cheered, which caused the venerable professor to say: "Silence!" This definition was made and cheered, with the usual reprimand, frequently during his lectures. Once, near the conclusion, however, the students did not cheer, but Lord Kelvin promptly rapped out, "Silence!" as before.

He stated that in the year 1874 the father entered into a verbal agreement with him that he should have a 90 acre farm in Ingham County in return for moneys advanced and for services. The commissioners disallowed the claim and he has taken an appeal to the circuit court.

The city authorities are about to take a new tack in the matter of recording deaths and will try and keep the death rate down so that it will not go out that Ann Arbor is an unhealthful city. Out of town patients who come here to be treated and are placed in private families on account of the over-crowded condition of the hospitals will be placed down in the "deaths at the hospital" column.

At the state photographers' convention, recently held in Grand Rapids, Prof. Griffith, in his lecture on art, chose the picture of Miss Elsie Kempf, executed by Rentschler, of this city, as the best on exhibition, he pronouncing it perfect in every detail. He dwelled very critically upon the subject of photography and occupied considerable time in describing the mirts of Mr. Rentschler's superior work.

The circuit court will hold a session at 7 o'clock tonight to determine what shall be done in the case of John Miller, who is cited to appear to answer why he should not be punished for contempt for not obeying the orders of the court to pay $30 solicitor's fees to Arthur Brown and $2 per week alimony to his wife, Ella Miller, who is suing for divorce.

The manual training symposium will bring out a good audience on Tuesday, Feb. 7th, at 8 p. m., in the Christian church on S. University ave. Short speeches will be made by Dr. Mosher, Prof. Hinsdale, Prof. Lloyd and Supt. Slauson, of Ann Arbor, and Dr. Richard Boone, of Ypsilanti State Normal, Prof. Scherzer, the Misses Schriver, Stowe and Wise, of the faculty, and Supt. George, of Ypsilanti public schools.

The third concert of the Choral Union series was given in University hall last evening. A much larger number was in attendance than at the previous concerts. The violinist, Mr. Willy Burmester, played with such depth of feeling and in sympathy with his music. His rendering of the "Air," by Bach, was extremely fine and gave his audience great pleasure. The accompanist, Miss Jeanette Durno, was gifted in an especial manner, and was just what an artist would demand. Altogether it was a most delightul concert.

The Times has been so busy of late recording scenes of domestic infelicity and family quarrels that have got into courts of law to be aired for the edification of the public, that it has overlooked a number of new arrivals into the world. The following arrived "too late to classify" in Glen V. Mills' new directory: To Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Masten, a son; to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Boynton, a daughter; to Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Darling, a son; to Mr. and Mrs. Dean Seabolt, a daughter; to Mr. and Mrs. George Crocker, a son; to Mr. and Mrs. Oscar F. Schmid, of Jackson, a daughter.

Tomorrow the city Y. M. C. A. will celebrate its fifth anniversary. Prof. F. S. Goodrich, of Albion college, will be the speaker at the men's meeting at 2:45 p. m. in the rooms of the association. Special vocal and instrumental music will be rendered. The association extends a cordial invitation to all men to come and help them celebrate. In the evening, at 7:30, at the Presbyterian church, Prof. Goodrich will deliver the anniversary address. Subject, "The Young Men's Christian Association." Those who have heard Mr. Goodrich will certainly say that he is a splendid speaker. He should be greeted with a full house at both the afternoon and evening meetings.

THE CLIENT OBEYED ORL

Clemenceau Promised to Use His Influence and Did So.

M. Georges Clemenceau, who has been so prominently before the public in the Dreyfus affair as editor of the Aurore, told us a good story in the chamber of deputies the other day, says To-Day. Years ago, when he was the mayor of Martre and at the same time a deputy, he opened a dispensary in the quarter, where advice was given free, for Clemenceau is a specialist in skin diseases. One day he noticed that he had just one hour in which to get his luncheon and go down to the chamber, where he had to interpellate the government. He called his assistant and said: "How many more patients are there waiting?" "Six," replied the man. One after the other had his case diagnosed, and Clemenceau, after another glance at his watch, said: "Tell the other two to undress at once, as I have only two more minutes to wait." One entered and Clemenceau wrote out a prescription in the twinkling of an eye. The last man came in as naked as the day when he was born. Clemenceau eyed him for a minute and then said: "You are suffering from no skin disease. What have you come here to worry me for?" The man looked at him aghast for a minute and replied: "Skin disease? I never said I had a skin disease. Your man came and told me to undress, monsieur le depute, and I did so. All I wanted to ask you was to use your influence to get my sister a place in the postoffice in Algeria." Clemenceau smiled, took his name and did use his influence.

After the crime Dragon showed such a strange aversion to Macaire that suspicion was aroused against him. This animal was also the principal performer in a canine drama named "Poor Dog Tray." Eighty years ago there was a theater at Peckham, where a youth named John Baldwin Buckstone made his debut as the injured captain. There is a venerable theatrical legend which deals with a piece called "The Caravan Driver and His Dog." One evening the leading tragedian was taken ill, and the prompter rushed off to the manager to inform him that the play must be changed. "How you alarmed me," said that worthy man, ordering a glass of strong brandy and water to steady his nerves; "the tragedian unwell! I was afraid it was the dog."—New York Times.

The Political Equality Club will meet on Monday, Feb. 6, at 3 p. m., with Mrs. C. George, 347 S. Main st. All interested are cordially invited to be present.

During the month of January there were 17 deaths in the city. Five of these occurred at the hospitals and two others were non-residents. This leaves deaths of only 10 actual residents of Ann Arbor.

In the assault and battery cases against Henry Robbins who was arrested upon complaint of his wife, the defendant yesterday afternoon changed his plea to guilty and he was fined $10 and $4.55 costs.

Mr. B. M. Thompson, of Ann Arbor, was in the city last evening on business. He returned home today. He is favorably impressed with Owosso, and always makes it a point to stop over here while out of his home city.—Owosso American.

In the estate of Isaac Dunn, Charles Dunn, a son, put in a claim of $1,500. He stated that in the year 1874 the father entered into a verbal agreement with him that he should have a 90 acre farm in Ingham County in return for moneys advanced and for services. The commissioners disallowed the claim and he has taken an appeal to the circuit court.

The city authorities are about to take a new tack in the matter of recording deaths and will try and keep the death rate down so that it will not go out that Ann Arbor is an unhealthful city. Out of town patients who come here to be treated and are placed in private families on account of the over-crowded condition of the hospitals will be placed down in the "deaths at the hospital" column.

At the state photographers' convention, recently held in Grand Rapids, Prof. Griffith, in his lecture on art, chose the picture of Miss Elsie Kempf, executed by Rentschler, of this city, as the best on exhibition, he pronouncing it perfect in every detail. He dwelled very critically upon the subject of photography and occupied considerable time in describing the mirts of Mr. Rentschler's superior work.

Consequently he was returned to his home to await a vacancy in a regular insane asylum.

Mrs. Marshal O. Waggoner, of Toledo, has been granted a temporary injunction restraining her husband from disposing of any of his personal property during the pendency of the suit. In her bill of complaint she says that her husband has threatened at numerous times to have her committed to an insane asylum, besides which he has pointed a pistol at her and threatened to kill her. She finally states that her husband owns considerable property, besides $7,000 in personal property, moneys and securities, and she wants $5,000 of it.

CYRANO DE BERGERCA.

The management of the opera house is being kept busy answering questions in relation to the Sol Smith Russel engagement and in order to relieve a portion of the strain the following information is given:

Sol Smith Russel will play in Ann Arbor on Wednesday, Feb. 8.

He will present his new play, "Hon. John Grigsby."

The prices are: Parquet and first row in dress circle, $1.50; remainder of circle, $1; balcony, 75 cents; gallery, 50 cents.

The sale will commence Tuesday morning, Feb. 7, at 9 o'clock. Only parquet and dress circle seats will be sold in advance. The south portion of the house will be on sale at Hangsterfer's on State st., and the north portion at Wahr's on Main st.

This will be the most noteworthy attraction of the year and those who expect to attend must be on hand early to secure choice seats.

The management expects a regular "Cyrano de Bergerac" rush for reserved seats and to prevent ticket speculation will limit the number of tickets sold to any one person at six tickets.

BROWNIES.

Cure Constipation.

The Most Pleasant and Delightfully Effective Laxative Ever Discovered.

DIRECTIONS.

LAXATIVE—Whenever you are costive, bilious, have a sick headache, a sour stomach, a bad taste in the mouth, take a Brownie. It will make you feel better at once and in due time give you relief.

CONSTIPATION—Habitual constipation requires patience for a cure. At the start, one Brownie twice a day, night and morning, until the stools are softened, then one Brownie at night. Keep patiently at it, and Brownies will cure you.

TORPID LIVER—Lack of exercise, constant sitting down at your work, eating indigestible food, causes a lazy liver with its sickening results. Brownies are the finest liver stimulant ever discovered. Take a Brownie at night and morning with copious draughts of water.

PIMPLES—Facial eruptions of any kind, boils, blotches, blackheads, all are caused by impure blood, due to imperfect elimination of useless matter from the body. Persistent use of Brownies in small doses, a quarter Brownie 3 or 4 times a day, will make the complexion clear and beautiful.

The following deaths occurred in the city during the month of January: Lizzie Caswell, Russell C. Kuigan, Barbara Warner, Daniel B. Green, John Wanzer, Bernard Kirk. The causes of these deaths were: Phthysis, inflammation of the lungs, consumption, senility, general debility, fracture of the skull.

At the morning service at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow the pastor will preach on "Poverty and Happiness." Subject of the evening sermon, "The Ideal Aim." Citizens and students cordially invited. All seats free. Sunday school, 12 m.; Senior C. E., 6:30 p. m. Young people are always welcome. Conference and prayer in Y. W. C. A. rooms at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening.

After a rest of several years the large clock in the city clerk's office has at last gotten a "move on itself" and has started in once more to measure off the hours. All the jewelers in the city have tried their hands at it, and at last some one has been found to solve the problem. It is entirely possible, however, that a relapse will set in, so habitues of the office are not yet indulging in triumphs.

Apropos of the Fourth of July celebration in '48, Miss Lydia A. Spencer, of Huron st., says that she was present as a little girl. The celebration was held on the island, and her father, Grove Spencer, made a speech in which he said that woman would make great advancement in the following fifty years. This caused one old gentleman to remark: "Squire, I think the women know enough now."

Services at St. Luke's tomorrow: Morning prayer at 9 o'clock; litany, sermon, holy communion, 10:30; Sunday school, 12 m.; evening prayer, sermon, 7:30; confirmation lecture at the church house at 6:30. In the evening the Rev. A. W. Mann will conduct a service for deaf mutes, translating the usual service into the sign language. He will also give an address on the history and development of the systematic education of deaf mutes.

Said Capt. J. N. Wallace to The Times reporter today: "I see that your paper has started an agitation of the city hall question. That's a good thing. I am a taxpayer and I am perfectly willing to bear my share of the burden. A city of this size needs a public building and the sooner we get at erecting it the better. Put it on the corner of Washington and Pearl sts., where it will show from the electric road. It would be a good investment for the city in more ways than one. Not only would it save us the rent of offices and be a great convenience to citizens, but it would help us all in a general way by showing to strangers that we are enterprising and public-spirited. As I said before, I am perfectly willing to do my share of the work."

THE JUNIOR EXHIBITION.

Last evening the junior class of the Ypsilanti high school gave the second half of their annual exhibition. The stage was decorated as tastefully as on the previous week, and as before the evening's proceedings moved off without a break.

The music of the evening consisted of a quartet, by Misses Amsden and Damon, Messrs. Clark and Cluff; solos by Miss De Lynn Deubel and Mr. Harper Maybee, and a violin solo by Miss Maraquita Wallin. Miss May George was accompanist.

Of the literary numbers, four strong orations were delivered by Arthur C. Cluff, on the "Nicaragua Canal"; by George Goodspeed, on "The Nation's Ward" by Ralph Gary, on "Uncle Sam"; by Lewis L. Forsyth, on "Our Nation's Destiny." These productions were well writtend and excellently delivered. The freshness and originality of thought were especially noticeable.

Miss Oma Baily Read an essay on "The Benefits of War," Miss Grace Comstock followed with "The Acadian Tragedy," Miss Olive Collins asked "What's in a Name?" The three were creditable efforts and revealed the same strong points brought out in the orations.

With spirit and effectiveness were delivered the two declamations, "Washington and Marlborough," by James Fraser; "The Irish Philosopher," by Fred Graves; and two recitations, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," by Miss Edna Barlow, "A la Ponce de Leon," by Miss Loretta Brown.

Last, but by no means least, were the poem "The Mystery of the Maine," by Miss Jean McKay, and the story "The Affair of Devil's Acre," by Norman Johnson.

The invocation and benediction were given by Rev. B. F. Aldrich.

REV. BLODGETT.

The Methodist church was crowded last evening with persons of all and no denominations gathered to hear a "revival" talk from Rev. Blodgett, of Detroit, the moral crusade and reform specialist. Rev. Blodgett is a very powerful speaker, of the dramatic order, and possesses the power of holding the closest attention of his audiences. In the early part of his address he informed his hearers that he had just come from a "red-hot revival meeting" and that he was still in the mood for an active campaign, but he confined himself, notwithstanding, to a plain, quiet talk. One of the first points was an appeal against the false culture which is prevalent. Said he: "If Christ should come to one of our college towns, do you think he would possess the so-called 'culture?' No, a thousand times, and he would be the very last to uphold it."

He takes an extreme view of the original sin—"Old Adam"—proposition. In thundering tones he proclaimed: "Human nature is evil, is bad through and through. Whether you go to a college or to a vestial den of iniquity, the real nature of those you find there is bad, is utterly wicked. I repeat it, human nature is naturally utterly bad."

He touched on his experience in Detroit but lightly. In one instance, however, he said: "Over in Detroit they keep telling me to keep quiet and not be alarmed at sin. My friends, do you know that Jesus was the greatest alarmist the world has ever seen? He was not content to see sin and suffering and make no effort to stamp it out."

The Rev. Blodgett is a man of deep earnestness, and has in every way the courage of his convictions.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Editor Evening Times:

A communication in The Times of Feb. 1, signed "Parent," would seem to demand a word of explanation on account of the reference to the teachers of the high school and the evident mis-

A London burglar was set upon by a pet orang-outang in a house he was robbing, and was so badly bitten and mutilated that he died.

Most of the so-called protections against burglary, do not protect any more than most of the so-called "remedies" protect from the burglary of the "house of this body" by the crafty burglar—Disease. Like the regular burglar, disease works with as little disturbance as possible.

You think you have that jewel of health you possess in perfect safety. But little disturbances if they were heeded would show the burglar at his work. Loss of appetite precedes loss of flesh. Then comes weakness followed by the more disturbing symptoms of lingering cough, sore throat, bronchitis and bleeding at the lungs. When any or all these symptoms appear, begin the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the best of all medicines. It is non-alcoholic. It helps the stomach and separates the good parts of the food from the bad. It supplies thin, impoverished, run-down blood with the needed rich red corpuscles. It makes solid flesh—the sort that strong people have. If you value your health, don't allow the dealer to sell you something else. Insist upon having Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"I must say Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the most wonderful medicine I ever used," writes Geo. S. Henderson, Esq., of Denaud, Lee Co., Florida. "I had a bad bruise on my right ear, and my blood was badly out of order. I tried local doctors but with no good results. Finally I wrote you the particulars in my case and you advised your 'Golden Medical Discovery' which I began to take. From the first bottle I began to feel better and when I had taken eight bottles the sore was healed up."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and biliousness. They never gripe.

CYRANO DE BERGERAC

Sol Smith Russell will appear at the Ann Arbor opera house on Wednesday, Feb. 8, in his new play, "Hon. John Grigsby," and the management expects a regular "Cyrano de Bergerac" rush for tickets. The chances are that the entire house will be sold out in advance. Ypsilanti patrons will be accommodated and a chance afforded to secure as choice seats as there are in the house. But in order to do this names must be left at The Times office, Central drug store, Ypsilanti, before Tuesday morning. At 9 o'clock Tuesday morning the advance sale will open in both cities, and at that hour the treasurer of the Ann Arbor opera house will be at the Times office, Ypsilanti, with just as many choice seats as there are names handed in. Persons who do not hand in their names will have to take chances on getting either poorer seats or none at all.

PERJURY.

On the complaint of Frederick Forsyth, of Ypsilanti township, Henry D. Wanty, of the same section, was this morning arrested on the charge of perjury. Wanty waived examination and was bound over to appear in the circuit court March 6. His father signed his bond.

The arrest grew out of the assault and battery case of Mrs. Fred Forsyth vs. Henry D. Wanty. The defendant was acquitted, but Forsyth claims to have collected evidence since that date which will prove that Wanty was released on the false testimony of himself and others.

Adoration of Flowers.

In ancient times plant-worship was universal in the east. Even now it is still observed in parts of Persia and India. A traveler gives this description of flower worship: "A true Persian in flowing robes of blue would stand and meditate over every flower he saw as if it were a vision. When the vision was fulfilled and the ideal flower he was seeking found, he would spread his mat and sit down before the flower until the setting of the sun. For nights he would return, bringing his friends to see the flower. They would play the lute to it, pray to it, and after prayer still sit sipping sherbet and talking the most hilarious and shocking scandal late in the moonlight. Night after night this would go on until the flower faded, and at the last the entire company would rise before it and join in a serenade from an ode to Hafiz. They would then depart."

WHAT BECAME OF THE CROWD

Billygoat from Pacific Avenue Causes a Diversion in Clark Street.

The billygoat broke away from his home in a shabby quarter on Pacific avenue and made a dash for La Salle avenue. Two or three boys started in pursuit and before they had gone the length of a single block twenty boys had joined them and in a few seconds more as many men had been drawn along and formed the incipient crowd. Billygoat was well in the lead, head and tail up, and clearning the sidewalk of everybody before him. Seemingly every building he passed was emptied of its people to witness the sport. At Monroe street the goat turned to the right, when a portion of the crowd rushed by him and attempted to "right about face" him, and they did stop him. Soon a ring was formed, in which the men stood twenty deep, and outside this ring moved and surged an excited multitude. Never were more people at a street fight or at a fire. In the vacant space inside the ring stood the goat, his horned head lowered and his feet well planted to resist attack. Then began the thrusting forward by those behind them into the open space of men and boys in order to tease and madden the goat. Against every such intruder he ran a-but, and in almost no time the space was vacant again. This feature of the sport continued for a good many minutes and until the goat himself made a dash, that was equal in bravery to Cervera's in Santiago harbor, for liberty, and succeeded in scattering the crowd in a panic. Now once more billygoat was on the sidewalk, and, assuming the pose and airs of a victor, he still made his way northward. The crowd rallied again and still pursued. The street for a couple of blocks was as full of people as it ever is when the circus is coming into the town. On went the goat to about the middle of the block, when, apparently feeling too sensibly the pressing of the crowd behind, he sprang from the sidewalk into the street and ran diagonally across to the end of the opposite block. There he butted his way through an opposing part of the crowd and attempted his escape into the alley. The multitude surged after him, but just as they seemed about to overtake him the friendly open door at the rear of a sumptuous saloon received him out of their sight. A quarter of an hour later the owner of the captured goat was seen on Clark street, leading his now willing captive back to Pacific avenue. What became of the crowd—where did it disappear to? Nobody could tell. But it did disappear instantly, just as such crowds do, as will those that suddenly gather to see a dog kill a rat that is let out of a trap, as those that gather to witness a breakdown or a fight between newsboys.

Aluminum Bronze.

Aluminum bronze, which is likely to come more and more into use, is an alloy composed in Germany of 90 to 95 per cent of aluminum and 5 to 10 per cent of copper, of golden color, which keeps well in the air without soon becoming dull and changing the color. It can be cast excellently, can be filed well and turned, possesses an extraordinary hardness and firmness, attains a high degree of polish and is malleable and forgeable. The technical working of the material is not essentially different from that of iron—in fact, the metal is, especially in a warm condition, worked like iron on an anvil, with hammer and chisel, only that the temperature to be maintained in forging lies between dark and light cherry red. In case the articles are not forged in one piece, and the putting together of separate parts is a necessity, riveting, and, in particular soldering have to be resorted to, with hard or soft solder. Besides forging, the bronze is well suited for embossing. After finishing the pieces, the metal can be toned in different ways, as may be desired, by treatment with acid.

Always Wanting to Work Somebody.

"You say," remarked the pedestrian, "that you have vainly wished for work." "Many a time," answered Meandering Mike. "What is your favorite occupation?" "It all depends on where I happen to be. In Oregon it's pickin' bananas and in Florida it's shoveling snow."—Washington Star.

BRONCHITIS

Bronchitis is very prevalent. It generally begins with a common cold, attended with cough, hoarseness, soreness of the lungs, tightness of the chest and difficulty in breathing. If not cured, it becomes dangerous—thousands die from bronchitis annually. Dr. John W. Bull's Cough Syrup is the best remedy for this disease; it relieves the cough at once, eases expectoration, and cures in a few days.

Dr. Bull's
Cough Syrup
Will promptly cure Bronchitis.
Doses are small and pleasant to take. Doctors recommend it. Price 25 cts. At all druggists.

Another Search for Sunken Wealth.

There is some likelihood of another attempt being made to secure the fortune of a Croesus that lies buried under the rocks near Gunwalloe, in the Lizard district of Cornwall. In 1574 a Spanish ship bearing a freight of $17,000,000 and many bars of gold for safe custody in London, as it was dangerous to attempt to take the treasure to Spain at the time, was wrecked amid the sands and rocks some distance from the shore. This great sum has lain buried ever since. A part of the treasure was once secured by an enterprising Cornishman, and more than one band of speculators has tried to rob the sea of its spoils.

A Terrible Revenge.

"I used to be engaged to a young woman artist." "Is that so?" "Yes sir; and last year she visited my wife and painted a pond lily and cat-tail panel for every room in the house."—Chicago Record.

It is entirely possible, however, that a relapse will set in, so habitues of the office are not yet indulging in triumphs.

Apropos of the Fourth of July celebration in '48, Miss Lydia A. Spencer, of Huron st., says that she was present as a little girl. The celebration was held on the island, and her father, Grove Spencer, made a speech in which he said that woman would make great advancement in the following fifty years. This caused one old gentleman to remark: "Squire, I think the women know enough now."

What the Banks and Leading Business Men of Kalamazoo Think of the Michigan Accident Association

KALAMAZOO, MICH., June 6, 1898.

TO THE PUBLIC:

We the undersigned, hereby certify that we are personally acquainted with the officers and directors of the Michigan Accident Association of this city, and know them to be first-class, responsible business men, who we believe will carry out to the letter any obligations they may incur. We would further say that from what we know of the methods and success of the Michigan Accident Association we believe it to be one that is judiciously managed and conducted on strict business principles Among a large membership in this city we have never heard a complaint of unfair treatment or failure to meet all legitimate obligations.

LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN UNOCCUPIED TERRITORY.

Last evening the junior class of the Ypsilanti high school gave the second half of their annual exhibition. The stage was decorated as tastefully as on the previous week, and as before the evening's proceedings moved off without a break.

The music of the evening consisted of a quartet, by Misses Amsden and Damon, Messrs. Clark and Cluff; solos by Miss De Lynn Deubel and Mr. Harper Maybee, and a violin solo by Miss Maraquita Wallin. Miss May George was accompanist.

Of the literary numbers, four strong orations were delivered by Arthur C. Cluff, on the "Nicaragua Canal"; by George Goodspeed, on "The Nation's Ward'" by Ralph Gary, on "Uncle Sam"; by Lewis L. Forsyth, on "Our Nation's Destiny." These productions were well writtend and excellently delivered. The freshness and originality of thought were especially noticeable.

Miss Oma Baily read an essay on "The Benents of War," Miss Grace Comstock followed with "The Acadian Tragedy," Miss Olive Collins asked "What's in a Name?" The three were creditable efforts and revealed the same strong points brought out in the orations.

With spirit and effectiveness were delivered the two declamations, "Washington and Marlborough," by James Fraser; "The Irish Philosopher," by Fred Graves; and two recitations, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," by Miss Edna Barlow, "A la Ponce de Leon," by Miss Loretta Brown.

Last, but by no means least, were the poem "The Mystery of the Maine," by Miss Jean McKay, and the story "The Affair of Devil's Acre," by Norman Johnson.

The invocation and benediction were given by Rev. B. F. Aldrich.

REV. BLODGETT.

The Methodist church was crowded last evening with persons of all and no denominations gathered to hear a "revival" talk from Rev. Blodgett, of Detroit, the moral crusade and reform specialist. Rev. Blodgett is a very powerful speaker, of the dramatic order, and possesses the power of holding the closest attention of his audiences. In the early part of his address he informed his hearers that he had just come from a "red-hot revival meeting" and that he was still in the mood for an active campaign, but he confined himself, notwithstanding, to a plain, quiet talk. One of the first points was an appeal against the false culture which is prevalent. Said he: "If Christ should come to one of our college towns, do you think he would possess the so-called 'culture?' No, a thousand times, and he would be the very last to uphold it."

He takes an extreme view of the original sin—"Old Adam"—proposition. In thundering tones he proclaimed: "Human nature is evil, is bad through and through. Whether you go to a college or to a vestial den of iniquity, the real nature of those you find there is bad, is utterly wicked. I repeat it, human nature is naturally utterly bad."

He touched on his experience in Detroit but lightly. In one instance, however, he said: "Over in Detroit they keep telling me to keep quiet and not be alarmed at sin. My friends, do you know that Jesus was the greatest alarmist the world has ever seen? He was not content to see sin and suffering and make no effort to stamp it out."

The Rev. Blodgett is a man of deep earnestness, and has in every way the courage of his convictions.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Editor Evening Times:

A communication in The Times of Feb. 1, signed "Parent," would seem to demand a word of explanation on account of the reference to the teachers of the high school and the evident misapprehension of the writer of the article. Books are not introduced into schools at the caprice of teachers. No books can be used unless authorized by the board of education. Changes in text books are made only when necessary to keep abreast of the times, or when a new book—fully equivalent to the old for our purpose—can be had at a considerably lower price. Changes of text books in our schools are comparatively infrequent and are, with wise conservatism, delayed until the necessity is pressing.

It will give me pleasure at all times to make a personal explanation of any matter connected with the schools to any one interested.

Supt. of Public Schools.

CYRANO DE BERGERAC

Sol Smith Russell will appear at the Ann Arbor opera house on Wednesday, Feb. 8, in his new play, "Hon. John Grigsby," and the management expects a regular "Cyrano de Bergerac" rush for tickets. The chances are that the entire house will be sold out in advance. Ypsilanti patrons will be accommodated and a chance afforded to secure as choice seats as there are in the house. But in order to do this names must be left at The Times office, Central drug store, Ypsilanti, before Tuesday morning. At 9 o'clock Tuesday morning the advance sale will open in both cities, and at that hour the treasurer of the Ann Arbor opera house will be at the Times office, Ypsilanti, with just as many choice seats as there are names handed in. Persons who do not hand in their names will have to take chances on getting either poorer seats or none at all.

PERJURY.

On the complaint of Frederick Forsyth, of Ypsilanti township. Henry D. Wanty, of the same section, was this morning arrested on the charge of perjury. Wanty waived examination and was bound over to appear in the circuit court March 6. His father signed his bond.

The arrest grew out of the assault and battery case of Mrs. Fred Forsyth vs. Henry D. Wanty. The defendant was acquitted, but Forsyth claims to have collected evidence since that date which will prove that Wanty was released on the false testimony of himself and others.

Adoration of Flowers.

In ancient times plant-worship was universal in the east. Even now it is still observed in parts of Persia and India. A traveler gives this description of flower worship: "A true Persian in flowing robes of blue would stand and meditate over every flower he saw as if it were a vision. When the vision was fulfilled and the ideal flower he was seeking found, he would spread his mat and sit down before the flower until the setting of the sun. For nights he would return, bringing his friends to see the flower. They would play the lute to it, pray to it, and after prayer still sit sipping sherbet and talking the most hilarious and shocking scandal late in the moonlight. Night after night this would go on until the flower faded, and at the last the entire company would rise before it and join in a serenade from an ode to Hafiz. They would then depart."

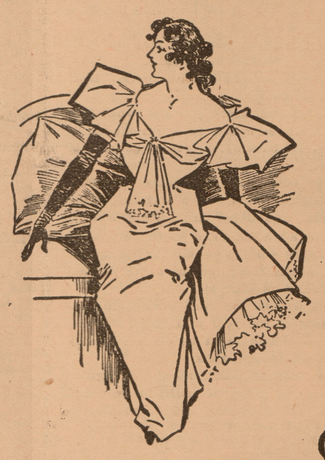

Aluminum Bronze.

Aluminum bronze, which is likely to come more and more into use, is an alloy composed in Germany of 90 to 95 per cent of aluminum and 5 to 10 per cent of copper, of golden color, which keeps well in the air without soon becoming dull and changing the color. It can be cast excellently, can be filed well and turned, possesses an extraordinary hardness and firmness, attains a high degree of polish and is malleable and forgeable. The technical working of the material is not essentially different from that of iron—in fact, the metal is, especially in a warm condition, worked like iron on an anvil, with hammer and chisel, only that the temperature to be maintained in forging lies between dark and light cherry red. In case the articles are not forged in one piece, and the putting together of separate parts is a necessity, riveting, and, in particular soldering have to be resorted to, with hard or soft solder. Besides forging, the bronze is well suited for embossing. After finishing the pieces, the metal can be toned in different ways, as may be desired, by treatment with acid.

Always Wanting to Work Somebody.

"You say," remarked the pedestrian, "that you have vainly wished for work." "Many a time," answered Meandering Mike. "What is your favorite occupation?" "It all depends on where I happen to be. In Oregon it's pickin' bananas and in Florida it's shoveling snow."—Washington Star.

Society Women

and, in fact, nearly all women who undergo a nervous strain, are compelled to regretfully watch the growing pallor of their cheeks, the coming wrinkles and thinness that become more distressing every day.

Every woman knows that ill-health is a fatal enemy to beauty and that good health gives to the plainest face an enduring attractiveness. Pure blood and strong nerves—these are the secret of health and beauty.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People build up and purify the blood and strengthen the nerves. To the young girl they are invaluable, to the mother they are a necessity, to the woman approaching fifty they are the best remedy that science has devised for this crisis of her life.

Mrs. Jacob Weaver, of Bushnell, Ill., is fifty-six years old. She says: "I suffered for five or six years with the trouble that comes to women at this time of life. I was much weakened, was unable, much of the time, to do my own work, and suffered beyond my power to describe. I was downhearted and melancholy. Nothing seemed to do me any good. Then I made up my mind to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

I bought the first box in March, 1897, and was benefited from the start. A box and a half cured me completely, and I am now rugged and strong."

Another Search for Sunken Wealth.

There is some likelihood of another attempt being made to secure the fortune of a Croesus that lies buried under the rocks near Gunwalloe, in the Lizard district of Cornwall. In 1574 a Spanish ship bearing a freight of $17,000,000 and many bars of gold for safe custody in London, as it was dangerous to attempt to take the treasure to Spain at the time, was wrecked amid the sands and rocks some distance from the shore. This great sum has lain buried ever since. A part of the treasure was once secured by an enterprising Cornishman, and more than one band of speculators has tried to rob the sea of its spoils.

A Terrible Revenge.

"I used to be engaged to a young woman artist." "Is that so?" "Yes sir; and last year she visited my wife and painted a pond lily and cat-tail panel for every room in the house."—Chicago Record.
